I pay for XM radio because I have access to a greater repertoire of music than I have on standard radio stations. It is a Godsend to have weather and traffic information that is infinitely better than what public stations can provide, and information is continually updated and ready when I want it, not when the stations choose to provide it.

On standard radio I spend more time listening to worthless BS from the disc jockeys and commercials for products/information I care nothing about. I am also tired of listening to the broadcasters opinions when it comes to the news - the news they report is more like listening to a gossip columnist and is made up of opinions rather than the news.

It is my right and my choice to pay for this excellent product of XM Radio; I cannot help it that the broadcasters cannot provide the quality service and information that XM radio does. Broadcasters should leave well enough alone - we are paying to have XM radio because we want it.
